HOME PRACTICE

Daily practice is essential for your child to make progress as a developing musician, and is necessary for the overall development of the ensemble. Parent involvement is encouraged to help students develop effective practicing habits. Here are some tips you can follow to help your child succeed:

- Students should play their instruments daily for development of the muscles required to play their instrument/vocal chords. Practice sessions should be a minimum of 20 minutes to help increase stamina.
- Find a place in your home that is free from distraction and a spot where the child can make noise without feeling the need to dampen their sound. A good chair and music stand are necessary for proper posture.
- Students should review the exercises taught in class. Practice the difficult parts in the music. When mistakes are made they should be reviewed and performed correctly.
- Ask your child to teach you. Information is best retained when students teach the knowledge to others.
- Provide opportunities for your child to perform for you.

There are no early morning rehearsals tomorrow morning. Morning rehearsals resume on Monday.
